FOREWORD

THE GROWTH OF manufacturing in Saskatchewan suggested the need for a products directory to be used for both record and reference purposes. This publication is designed to serve that need.

It is an interesting and heartening experience to look over a directory of Saskatchewan-made products and see the very many additions to consumer and producer merchandise turned out by Saskatchewan factories since the end of Second World War.

A wide range of products heretofore brought into Saskatchewan by rail from distant manufacturing centres are now being produced by Saskatchewan workers in Saskatchewan plants. In some instances these finished products are manufactured from raw materials obtained in the province.

The directory and the manufacturing growth it makes evident offer proof of the diversification that has taken place in our economy. Industrial development in primary and secondary fields has given our economy balance and stability. The Saskatchewan market area is no longer subject to the sharp fluctuations in purchasing power occasioned in former years by an almost total dependence on the grain harvest.

Saskatchewan manufacturers and business generally will find the directory useful in acquainting them with the goods and services readily accessible to them in their own province. Traders outside the boundaries of the province will find the directory an interesting source of information with which to appraise Saskatchewan's manufacturing expansion and the scope it offers for new development.

The future will see new pages added to the directory as Saskatchewan's manufacturing production extends and enlarges.

T. C. DOUGLAS
Premier of Saskatchewan

INTRODUCTION

THIS DIRECTORY of manufacturing in Saskatchewan is the first to be published by the Saskatchewan Industrial Development Office. We hope that it will serve a useful purpose in providing a handy list of Saskatchewan-made products and a ready reference to manufacturers in the province. Its principal purpose is to promote the sale of Saskatchewan-made products and to advertise Saskatchewan manufacturers.

In compiling this first Directory, as many available sources of information as possible have been utilized. Our thanks go particularly to the local Chambers of Commerce who have provided us with the names of manufacturers in their respective communities. Despite our efforts to provide a complete list of products and manufacturers in the province, undoubtedly errors and omissions have occurred and we hope that these will be brought to our attention.

This Directory will receive wide distribution within the province and elsewhere in Canada, the United States and abroad. We hope that thousands of copies will find their way to the desks of purchasing agents to assist them in their programme of 'Buy Saskatchewan'.

BUILDING SASKATCHEWAN INDUSTRY

THE NEW ECONOMY

THE POSITION OF Saskatchewan's economy today graphically illustrates the progress made and the transition achieved in liberating the economy from an almost total dependency on the variable fortunes of agriculture.

For the first four decades of its history the wealth of the province was measured largely in bushels of grain. The farm was the centre of Saskatchewan's economic life and over great stretches of the populated land area of the province the outward symbol of industry was the grain elevator.

The economic picture of the province in 1959 is different. This picture is a montage of many diversified parts. It is visible to the eye in the form of new and varied industrial architecture extending above southern grain fields and towering over the granite terrain of what was once a barren northern wilderness.

Progress to the goal of a strong diversified economy—a well-balanced coalescence of agriculture, resource development, and manufacturing—did not begin to achieve much momentum in Saskatchewan until the years following World War II. Oil and uranium discoveries set the stage for the greatest mineral play in the province's history and in the wake of heavy investment and development in primary fields the province's manufacturing structure began to grow.

Saskatchewan's industrialization has come a long way in a short time. Non-agricultural production is challenging the dominant role of the grain fields. The emergence of non-farm industry as a major force in the economic life of the province was clearly demonstrated in 1957 and again in 1958 when the value of non-agricultural output accounted for 65 per cent of the province's total commodity production.

The grain elevator no longer dominates the economic landscape. Southern areas of the province are dotted with the apparatus of oil and gas development: wells, pumpers, storage tanks, drilling rigs. Networks of pipes transport the oil and gas to domestic and export markets.

In the prolific light oil fields of south-eastern Saskatchewan a new multi-million dollar industry is salvaging casinghead gas and processing it into dry natural gas, butane, propane, iso-butane, natural gasoline, and sulphur.

Not many miles distant from the gas plant the Saskatchewan Power Corporation has commenced the generation of electric power from a new $40,000,000 generating station near Estevan. A second $40,000,000 power plant is in operation at Saskatoon. The production of electrical energy keeps up with the province's economic growth.

The industrial skylines of Saskatchewan towns and cities have altered. In the years since the war numbers of modern new factories have come into being in provincial centres. These industries are producing wire and cable, plastic pipe, heavy paper bags, transformers, corrugated containers, clothing, steel pipe, cement, building materials, boats, farm implements, chemicals, food products, sewer pipe and flue lining, and many others. These products, once hauled in from distant manufacturing centres, are now produced in Saskatchewan plants by Saskatchewan workers.

Early in 1960 the province will be a producer of steel. On a site north of Regina a modern steel rolling mill is under construction. The $15,000,000 plant of Interprovincial Steel Corporation Limited will roll skelp, plate, and structural steel. The mill is to be equipped to turn out 100,000 tons of steel annually.

The steel industry will employ approximately 175 workers and will have a yearly payroll of $1,000,000. Its annual output of steel will be valued at some $14,000,000.

The mill will establish Saskatchewan as a major Canadian steel centre. A basic steel supply in the province will stimulate the growth of secondary industries using this metal. The start of construction on the steel mill was followed by the announcement that Dominion Bridge Company Limited is to build a million-dollar plant in the province to fabricate steel.

In west-central Saskatchewan, at a point on the map called Coteau Creek, men and machines are proceeding with the work of constructing a great dam on the South Saskatchewan River. This momentous project was set in motion in July, 1958, when Premier T. C. Douglas signed an agreement with the federal government which cleared the way for construction to commence on this long-awaited irrigation and hydro-power scheme.

The dam, like the steel mill, will have a profound influence on the course and direction of Saskatchewan's economic growth far into the future.

The economic benefits of the dam will include large-scale irrigation, cheaper hydro-power for industry and homes, recreational and resort development, flood control, urban water supply, and population growth.

The harnessing of river waters will bring the boon of irrigation to a large farm area which is constantly exposed to the threat of drouth. Irrigation will increase the productivity of farm lands and make the land capable of growing a variety of specialty crops which will open the way to the establishment of processing and canning industries.

In the front rank of Saskatchewan development news is the word potash. For the first time in Canadian history the mining and refining of potash is going on at the $20,000,000 plant of Potash Company of America, near Saskatoon. The valuable mineral is recovered from mine workings some 3,300 feet underground.

For Saskatchewan, the Saskatoon industry means a potential annual production of 600,000 tons of processed potash worth some $12,000,000. The plant employs some 200 workers and its payroll will amount to approximately $1,000,000 annually. A second potash company, International Minerals & Chemical Corporation, is making progress in the sinking of a mine shaft at a site near Esterhazy, in south-eastern Saskatchewan.

Producing at maximum capacity, the combined potash output of the Saskatoon and Esterhazy plants will add something like $25,000,000 to the value of Saskatchewan's annual mineral production.

Potash development in Saskatchewan is just beginning. The supply of potash in this province is believed to be the world's largest. Its quality rates higher than the salt mined at Carlsbad, New Mexico. Producers are well situated geographically to serve Canadian and major U.S. markets. The industry will go on developing to establish the province as a world potash centre.

Industry in Saskatchewan is no longer confined to the southern half of the province. North from the City of Prince Albert and beyond the great stands of commercial forest is the extensive mineralized region of the Canadian Shield. Deep inside this vast area of Precambrian rock, at Beaverlodge in the north-west corner of the province, are the mine headframes and mills of one of the world's major uranium industries. These mining plants in 1958 delivered a uranium output valued at some $58,000,000. As the industrial uses of the radioactive mineral increase the output of the mines will expand.

Saskatchewan's Precambrian north is the spacious mineral hunting-ground of mining men and prospectors. With one area of the northland producing uranium and another, at Flin Flon, contributing zinc and copper and other base metals, the quest goes on for new hoards of hidden mineral wealth. The tempo of search has been intensified in recent years and many of Canada's leading mining companies are conducting exploration programs in Saskatchewan's north.

The northland reflects the changing times in Saskatchewan. Not many years ago a remote, non-productive, sparsely settled wilderness, the north today is alive and humming with industrial activity and its potential for new mining development is unlimited.

Trading centre of the far north is the modern growing community of Uranium City. Adjacent to the uranium mines that gave it birth, this young city straddles the ancient migration route of the barren land caribou and occasionally these nomadic animals traverse its main street in their passage from one northland area to another.

The mining of iron ore is another possible development in Saskatchewan's bright future. Extensive iron deposits discovered in the Choiceland area of north-eastern Saskatchewan have attracted the attention of mining companies and drilling work has been going on to evaluate the orebody. Earlier tests carried out on the iron indicated a high grade ore with a minimum of impurities. The steel mill and its eventual need of a secondary supply of raw material sharpened interest in the mining possibilities of the iron.

Modern air transport and efficient communication services have facilitated and accelerated the work of northern development. Now north and south are to be linked by an all-weather "road to resources" which will wind across rock and lake and muskeg a distance of 500 miles to Uranium City. Construction of the road was started in 1958.

The northern highway will open up new mineral areas, provide land access to fishing waters for sportsmen and tourists, and generally speed up northern development.

The pyramiding growth of the post-war years is also told in the exact and precise language of comparative statistics. Since 1945, non-agricultural production has climbed from $250,000,000 to $944,000,000.

Manufacturing growth has been steady and constant. Products, plants, and investment have expanded and multiplied. The year 1945 saw the output of factories valued at $167,688. The 1958 manufacturing production had an estimated value of $326,000,000.

Mineral production has taken giant strides. From a level of $22,171,000 in 1945 it soared to an estimated $214,000,000 in 1958. Crude oil recovery advanced from 16,000 barrels in 1945 to 45,000,000 barrels in 1958. The 1945 production was valued at $17,000. The 1958 value was approximately $100,000,000.

The uranium industry, which has employed as many as 2,500 men, was non-existent in 1945. A post-war development, the mines and mills of this far northern industry delivered a uranium production of $58,000,000 in 1958.

Saskatchewan's lignite coal industry has enjoyed its best years since the war. The 1945 output was valued at $2,334,000. The 1958 lignite production was estimated at $4,800,000.

Natural gas is playing an increasingly important role in the province's development. The Saskatchewan Power Corporation has moved with all possible speed to carry the economic fuel to homes and industries. The end of 1958 saw more than 45,000 customers receiving the service. Gas transmission and distribution lines extend a distance of 1,700 miles.

In the spring of 1959 the province had 192 gas wells capable of being operated. Sales of the fuel in 1958 amounted to 15,500,000 M.C.F. worth $1,525,000. This was an increase of more than $400,000 over 1957 sales.

Saskatchewan is also a producer of zinc and copper and related metals, sodium sulphate, clay, common salt, sand and gravel. Clay, a once neglected resource, is now the raw material used in half a dozen new industries.

Saskatchewan's commercial timber area covers 100,000 square miles and is capable of a production many times its present value. Millions of cords of pulpwood and billions of board feet of saw timber are ready to be converted to paper and lumber. An economic survey of the forest potential confirms the opportunities for large-scale development.

Electrical generating facilities in the province continue to expand. With the electrical load increasing at the rate of 20 per cent a year, the Saskatchewan Power Corporation is meeting the demand by a continuous program of plant construction. In September, 1958, the first 66,000 KW generator was placed in operation at the new $40,000,000 plant in Saskatoon. A second 66,000 KW generator was operating in March, 1959, at the $40,000,000 Boundary Dam generating station, near Estevan. By the end of 1959, the SPC's total generating capacity will reach 514,000 kilowatts, more than doubling the system's capacity in two years.

Farm electrification in Saskatchewan is nearing completion. Fifty thousand farms will be on provincial power in 1959. By the end of 1961, 98 per cent of the province's occupied farms will either be electrified or have electricity readily available.

Construction in the province has been maintained at peak levels. The building industry is experiencing the busiest period in its history. The value of construction work performed has climbed from a level of $17,000,000 in 1945 to a high mark of approximately $380,000,000 in 1958. An average of 27,000 workers were employed in construction during 1958. Salaries and wages totalled $111,000,000. The South Saskatchewan river dam project and expanding industrial activity will keep the industry busy and productive.

A mounting flow of investment capital into Saskatchewan is constantly expanding and diversifying the post-war pattern of development. Public and private investment has doubled since 1949. In less than 10 years this capital spending has climbed from $312,000,000 to more than $627,000,000.

The considerable growth that has taken place in Saskatchewan since the war is reflected in a more stable and diversified economic base, population increase, higher per capita earnings, greater employment opportunities, and better living standards. Resources, development, population, and purchasing power make the province an inviting market area for local production.

AIDS TO INDUSTRY

SASKATCHEWAN'S Industrial Development Office was established in 1950 for the purpose of aiding established industry to expand or to produce new products, and to attract new industries to Saskatchewan.

The normal complement of the office includes a director, three industrial consultants, three research economists, one development consultant, a publicity writer, and a statistical clerk. A clerical staff of four is also maintained.

The director and consultants devote a great deal of their time and energy to making, handling, and maintaining contacts with interested clients, in developing reports on new opportunities and in working with Saskatchewan firms on industrial problems including market and product surveys. The research economists work along with the consultants in the preparation of industrial opportunity reports and compile other information on Saskatchewan whenever required. The development consultant works with the municipalities (towns and cities), the Chambers of Commerce and other groups interested in the promoting of industry at the local level. The publicity officer is responsible for the preparation and distribution of information on industrial progress and opportunities in Saskatchewan.

A special phase of the work of the three industrial consultants is the preparation of applications for financial assistance from the Industrial Development Fund. As representatives of the applicant, these consultants prepare all necessary data required and represent the client before the Loan Committee. This committee consists of a group of responsible government officials who make recommendations on the loan application to the Government Finance Office. Final approval of a loan application is made by both the Government Finance Office and the Cabinet.

Loans in amounts up to 50 per cent of the fixed assets, which include land, building and installed equipment, are made for a period of five years at an annual interest rate of 6 per cent. To be eligible, the applicant must be a bona fide manufacturer producing an article for inventory. No loans are made to competitive industries in any one area unless it can be shown that the potential market is large enough to justify the new plant.

Over the years, the terms of reference of the fund have been modified and enlarged to take in certain service industries. Seed cleaning plants, built by co-operatives or municipalities, are now eligible on the grounds that such operations are of benefit to Saskatchewan's agricultural economy. On the basis of improving provincial entertainment and educational facilities, financial help is now available to radio and television stations. Service industries providing a repair service to resource-based industries within the province are also eligible for financial assistance; for example, service facilities for the repair of oil well drilling equipment.

For well-established companies, the fund will consider the erecting of a manufacturing building on a lease-back basis. Under this scheme, either the company or the fund contracts for the erection of the building to the required specifications and the company then pays a monthly rental sufficient to recover principal and interest over a period of years. At the end of this time, the building becomes the property of the company.

The working of the fund is quite flexible and the committee is willing to look at any reasonable proposal which falls within the general terms of reference. Money is not loaned for working capital or inventory requirements as funds for this phase of activity are normally available through the chartered banks. No limit is imposed on the amount of the loan, and individual loans made to date range from a few hundred dollars to almost a million. In the latter case, a ten year period of repayment was authorized.

For multi-million dollar projects, the government usually offers assistance in the form of a guarantee of bonds, both principal and interest. This was the situation in the case of the Saskatchewan Cement Company Ltd. and Interprovincial Steel Corporation Ltd. where provincial government guarantees of $5,500,000 and $10,000,000 were made on capital investments of $8,000,000 and $15,000,000 respectively.

Companies desiring technical information may make use of the facilities of the Saskatchewan Research Council, a provincial organization patterned along the lines of the National Research Council of Canada, but specializing in problems relating to Saskatchewan. The Council has a staff of well-trained personnel, who are available for consultation on technical matters. Companies wishing specific research work carried out may arrange to have the work done by the Council, although a charge is made for this latter service. The Saskatchewan Research Council also carries on its own programme of research and in this aspect works closely with the University of Saskatchewan.

The Industrial Development Office is quite prepared to carry out market or raw material studies, freight rate analysis, and to comment on operation whenever requested to do so by a local manufacturer. There is no charge for the services of the Office or for the publications given out.

Other government departments also do their part in helping to attract industry to Saskatchewan.

The "Buy Saskatchewan Act" specifies that government departments and crown corporations must support Saskatchewan industry whenever price and quality are equivalent. In actual practice, the government and its corporations will consider awarding tenders to local firms even when bids are slightly higher than the lowest tender. Normally, a maximum of five per cent above low tender is allowed for local manufacturers.

As a result of this policy, the purchases of the Saskatchewan Power Corporation have resulted in plants being built in the province to manufacture electrical transformers, electrical wire and cable and electric resistance welded line pipe for the transmission of natural gas.

The Department of Mineral Resources is well aware of the importance of developing the resources of the province and as a result has been very active in obtaining information on the mineral resources of the province. As an aid to the mining industry and to the prospectors, the Department of Mineral Resources has instigated a programme of carrying out aerial electric-magnetic surveys of potential mining areas in the Precambrian regions of Northern Saskatchewan. This information is then mapped and made available to mining companies and to individuals and has resulted in the staking of a great number of mining claims.

This department has also worked closely with the companies interested in developing the province's resources of oil, natural gas and potash. In this way production regulations and royalties satisfactory to all concerned have been worked out.

The Department of Highways is co-operating with the new potash mining companies in providing satisfactory roads into the potash mine areas whenever required. This same policy is being carried out in Northern Saskatchewan where two new roads are under construction to open up the new mining areas.

The Department of Labour operates training schools for pipe line welding and other trades while in certain industries such as the needle trades, special payments are made to employees while in training in order to bring their wages up to the minimum wage standard.

The Department of Natural Resources is also interested in encouraging the development of the forest products industry. Over the past few years extensive studies have been made by this department on the wood inventories of Saskatchewan. One of the department's major aims is to see the development of pulp and paper mills and as a result of their interest in this field it is quite feasible to expect that certain concessions might be granted to a company building the first pulp and paper mill.

Freight Services Division, Department of Municipal Affairs, studies and analyses traffic movements and traffic changes in Canada generally. It maintains sets of railway tariffs for both eastern and western Canada and is in a position to give advice on shipping methods, alternatives which might be considered, and in a general way to give assistance to government departments and to the public in buying transportation to best advantage. Various sections of the Saskatchewan economy contact the division either with individual problems or from the point of view of overall policy, or both.

Trade Services Branch, Department of Co-operation, encourages trade within the province and with other provinces. It assists with the establishment of new agencies and businesses in the province and provides a business information service.

Saskatchewan House in London, England, is the province's link with overseas' industry and business. The Agent General of Saskatchewan, Graham Spry, and his staff promote industrial and resource development and maintain close liaison with government departments in Saskatchewan.

FINANCIAL AID TO INDUSTRY

Saskatchewan's Industrial Development Fund Makes Loans to New and Expanding Industries

The Fund was set up as one of a number of Government aids designed to promote the establishment and growth of manufacturing in Saskatchewan. Large and small industries have received financial assistance from the Fund. The scope of the Fund has been broadened in recent years to include some service industries, among them seed cleaning plants.

- Loans are available in amounts up to 50% of fixed assets, which include land, building, and installed equipment.
- Standard repayment period is five years — the rate of interest is 6%.
- The Fund Committee must be satisfied that the loan does not place the applicant in a favoured position competitively to manufacturers of similar products in the province.

Manufacturers interested in this offer of financial aid should apply to SASKATCHEWAN'S INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT OFFICE. IDO completes loan applications for submission to the Industrial Development Fund Committee. Each request is considered on its own merits.
